

Meet the DTH

“Backshop”

“Backshop” is the back room in the Daily Tar Heel office where the majority of production work for the paper takes place. Editor-in-Chief Steven Norton leads the team of managing and visual editors who work in backshop. The writing desks work in the front room of the office, referred to as the “Newsroom.”

DTH Staff: By the Numbers

200 volunteer staffers are hired each year (approximately)

17 editors lead the news sections of the paper

43 paid positions exist for students (includes editors and assistants)

